THE TOLEDO MUSEUM OF ART

SUMMER 1969

THE MUSEUM'S GROWTH

The Toledo Museum of Art is a community educational institution as well as a world-recognized cultural center—vital, flexible, providing an atmosphere in which all can learn and enjoy the enriching values of art and music.

The names of over 7600 people appear in this issue of Museum News. Each of them has contributed in a significant way to the successful operation of the Art Museum as reported herein by its Director, Otto Wittmann.

Each has voluntarily contributed funds or significant portions of their time so that the Museum could continue to serve all segments of the community. Without the major donors, patrons, benefactors, and members, and without those who contribute their services in numerous ways, the Museum simply could not continue many of its services to the children and adults of our community.

For years we have been proud of the Museum's annual attendance, which we believe to be the highest per capita in our country except for the National Gallery. We are also proud—and grateful—for the thousands who volunteer their time and money to make possible this wide use of the Art Museum.

Special thanks should go to the Endowment Development Committee which is doing so much to build up the Museum's Endowment Fund—essential to off-set the costs of inflation and insure the Museum's continuing progress.

Members of this Committee are: David R. Rittenhouse, Chairman, Lawrence G. Bell, Samuel G. Carson, William C. Draper, Virgil A. Gladieux, Jerome F. Kapp, Marvin S. Kobacker, Stanley K. Levison, Charles L. McKelvy, Jr., Mrs. Peter Orser, Mrs. Roy Rike, Mr. Roy Rike, Duane Stranahan, Jr. and Willard I. Webb, III.

The Museum Reports...

SERVICES AND NEEDS

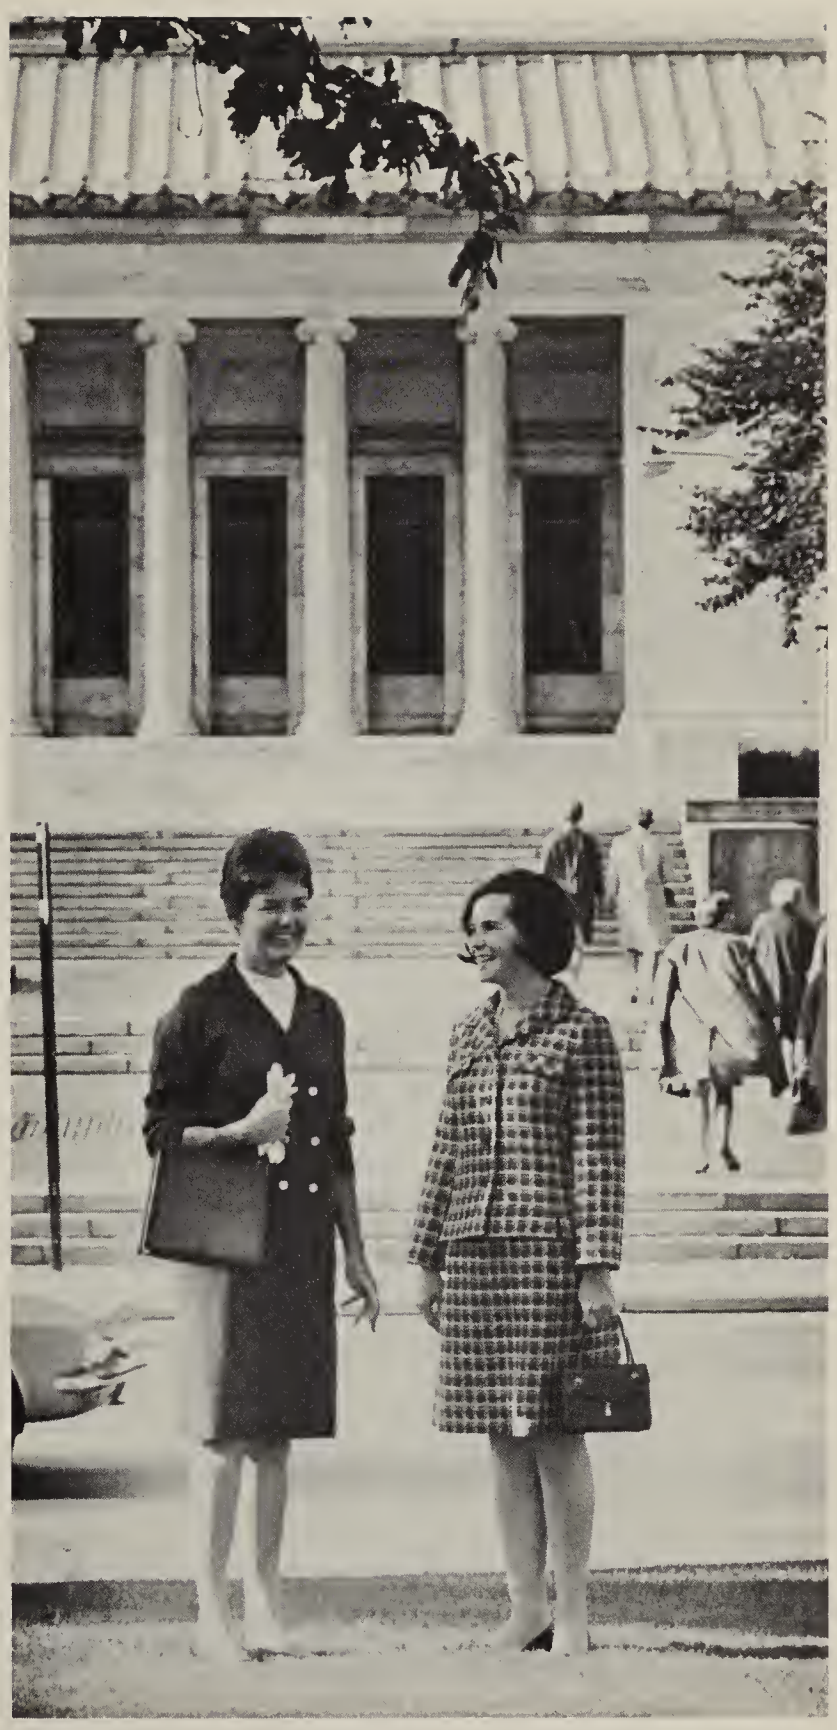
More records were broken, more activities undertaken, and more services were offered by your Museum last year than in any other year in its 67-year history.

It was an exciting year of increasing activity, re-direction of goals, broadened public support, successful exhibitions, innovations in education—and rising costs which are the inevitable result of expansion by this or any other museum or educational institution.

Attendance of 465,222 was the highest in the Museum's entire history, surpassing the former high of the Rembrandt Exhibition year of 1966 by 10,000.

Operating expenses also rose (by 9.4%) passing the $1,000,000 mark for the first time in the Museum's history.

More new members were obtained than ever before, to make the highest total membership in the Museum's history (7,119); more major donors contributed to the Museum's Endowment Fund than ever before; art and music education programs attracted more children and adults than ever before. The growth in musical activities (concerts and music classes) was especially evident as the community celebrated the Peristyle's 35th Anniversary Season as Toledo's finest concert hall.



FUNDS

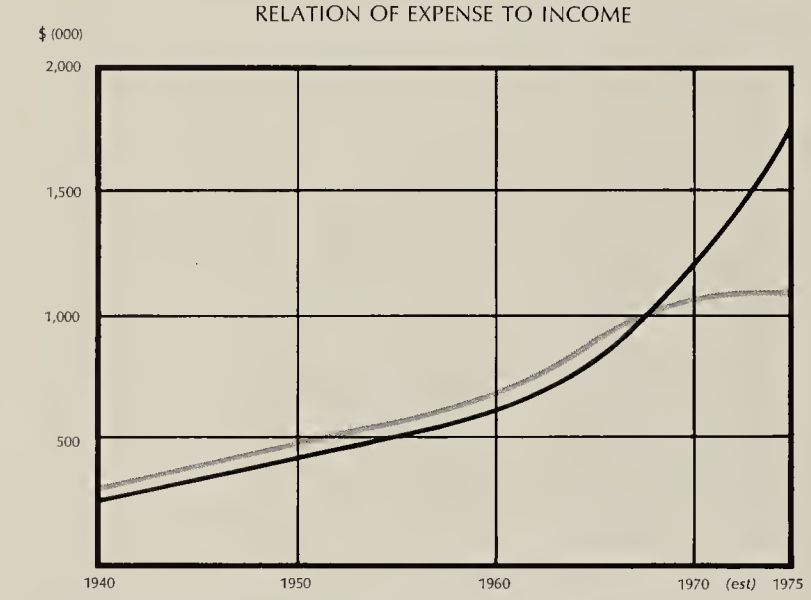
While the report of success and growth in 1968 should be satisfying, and the promise for the future inherent in the programs, construction and planning already undertaken is encouraging, the fact is that the Museum cannot move forward from this point without considerable expansion of income for both operations and art. The grand momentum inherent in any operation as successful as the Museum's during the past decade must not be lost or slowed because of lack of funds for continuing growth. The greatest challenge which the community faces in the decade to come will be how to support financially this momentum of growth. We cannot slow our pace. We cannot afford to fail the future.

Last year was a critical year. It was predicted in the Annual Report for 1965 that operational expenses would surpass income in 1968. And they very nearly did. Had we not received additional contributions to the Endowment Fund, there would have been a serious deficit.

Operation of the Museum is far from extravagant and it is only because of the hard work and long hours of its small, dedicated staff that the Museum has been able to accomplish its greatly expanded program during the past decade.

In general, expenses for operation have increased at a rate of about 7% compounded annually since 1960.

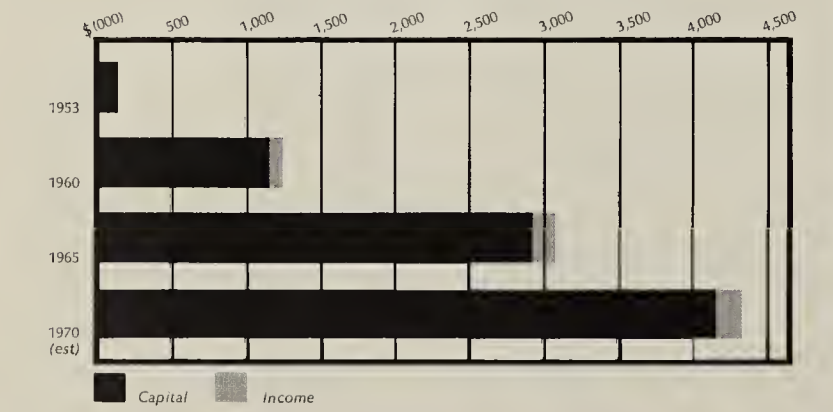
RELATION OF EXPENSE TO INCOME



Income: Growth estimated at 4% on existing capital, plus annual capital increase of $250,000
Expenses: Annual increase estimated at 8% based on forecast of Gross National Product increase.

The new Endowment Fund has increased available operating income by about 2% compounded annually (with the exception of a substantial increase in 1964 resulting from the generous bequest of William E. Levis).

GROWTH OF NEW ENDOWMENT FUND



In 1960 it was not necessary to allocate all income from the new Endowment Fund to Museum operations. In 1964 we began to use all income from the new Endowment Fund, the same year in which this income was greatly increased through the Levis bequest. 42% of the increase in operating costs was covered by new Endowment income.

General Museum attendance has closely paralleled this rise in operating costs. In 1960 annual attendance was 341,000; in 1968, 465,000. This represents about 4% per year compounded growth—or about 40% increase in eight years. Therefore, if attendance has grown about 4% per year and operating costs about 7%, the difference of 3% represents a modest enough factor for annual cost-of-living increase over the years.

It is recognized that attendance is an inaccurate yardstick of Museum services. Quality of services is dependent upon quality and quantity of Museum personnel available to provide these services such as teaching, curatorial, and maintenance.

Growth at an even greater rate in the next decade is possible, and probably desirable. Inflation is as inescapable for a museum as it is for any other enterprise. Skilled personnel can only be attracted and held by paying competitive salaries and benefits. The needs are clear. Considerably more income must be obtained if the Museum is to grow—or even if it is to hold its present status.

ART

We who live in Toledo have experienced or witnessed the significance of the Museum's extensive educational programs in art and music. We are especially aware of the importance of the free educational programs for children and are proud of the fact that the art education program is the largest in the world. We may also be familiar with the statistic that four out of five children and adults who visit the Museum come for some regularly scheduled program, such as a class, concert, or lecture.

However, all of this has significance only because of the Museum's collections of original works of art. These collections cannot continue to hold such great interest for our visitors if they do not continue to grow—to increase in quantity as well as quality. They must also be presented so that they are seen to their best advantage, and they must be protected, preserved, and cared for.

While Toledoans appreciate and benefit from the Museum's educational programs, the Museum's national and international prestige and reputation rests upon its collections of art. It is Toledo's art which is known in New York, Paris, London and other world capitals, and which draws visitors to Toledo each year from more than 40 foreign nations.

We have only to pick up the daily paper to read with monotonous regularity of new records for prices of art. The Times of London reports regularly on the rise in the art market through an index similar to the standard indexes for other markets more familiar to most of us. Swiss banking expert, Franz Pick, annually reports on fluctuations in art prices and regularly compares them (favorably to art) with other international money and equity assets. Art is an international business, and we have no choice but to compete in it if our art collections are to grow.

However, here we have little access to funds except to those specifically bequeathed by both Mr. and Mrs. Libbey for art acquisitions; and to a few other generous Toledoans who give art or funds for art to the Museum.

We need more funds, more interest, more support for art itself if the Museum is to maintain its place in the international ranking of great art museums. This need is as yet little understood in our community; and expenditures of large sums needed today to acquire great works of art would be less acceptable to Toledo's public than expenditures for building or education. Yet art is the very reason for the building or education. Fortunately, a few Toledoans understand this need, and we have been much encouraged by several generous gifts for art during the past year. It is, however, this need which makes it imperative that as much of the Libbey funds as possible continue to be made available for art.

Without art the Museum would be only a school. Without education the Museum might become only a warehouse. Both must be present if the Museum is to continue to play its significant cultural role in our community.

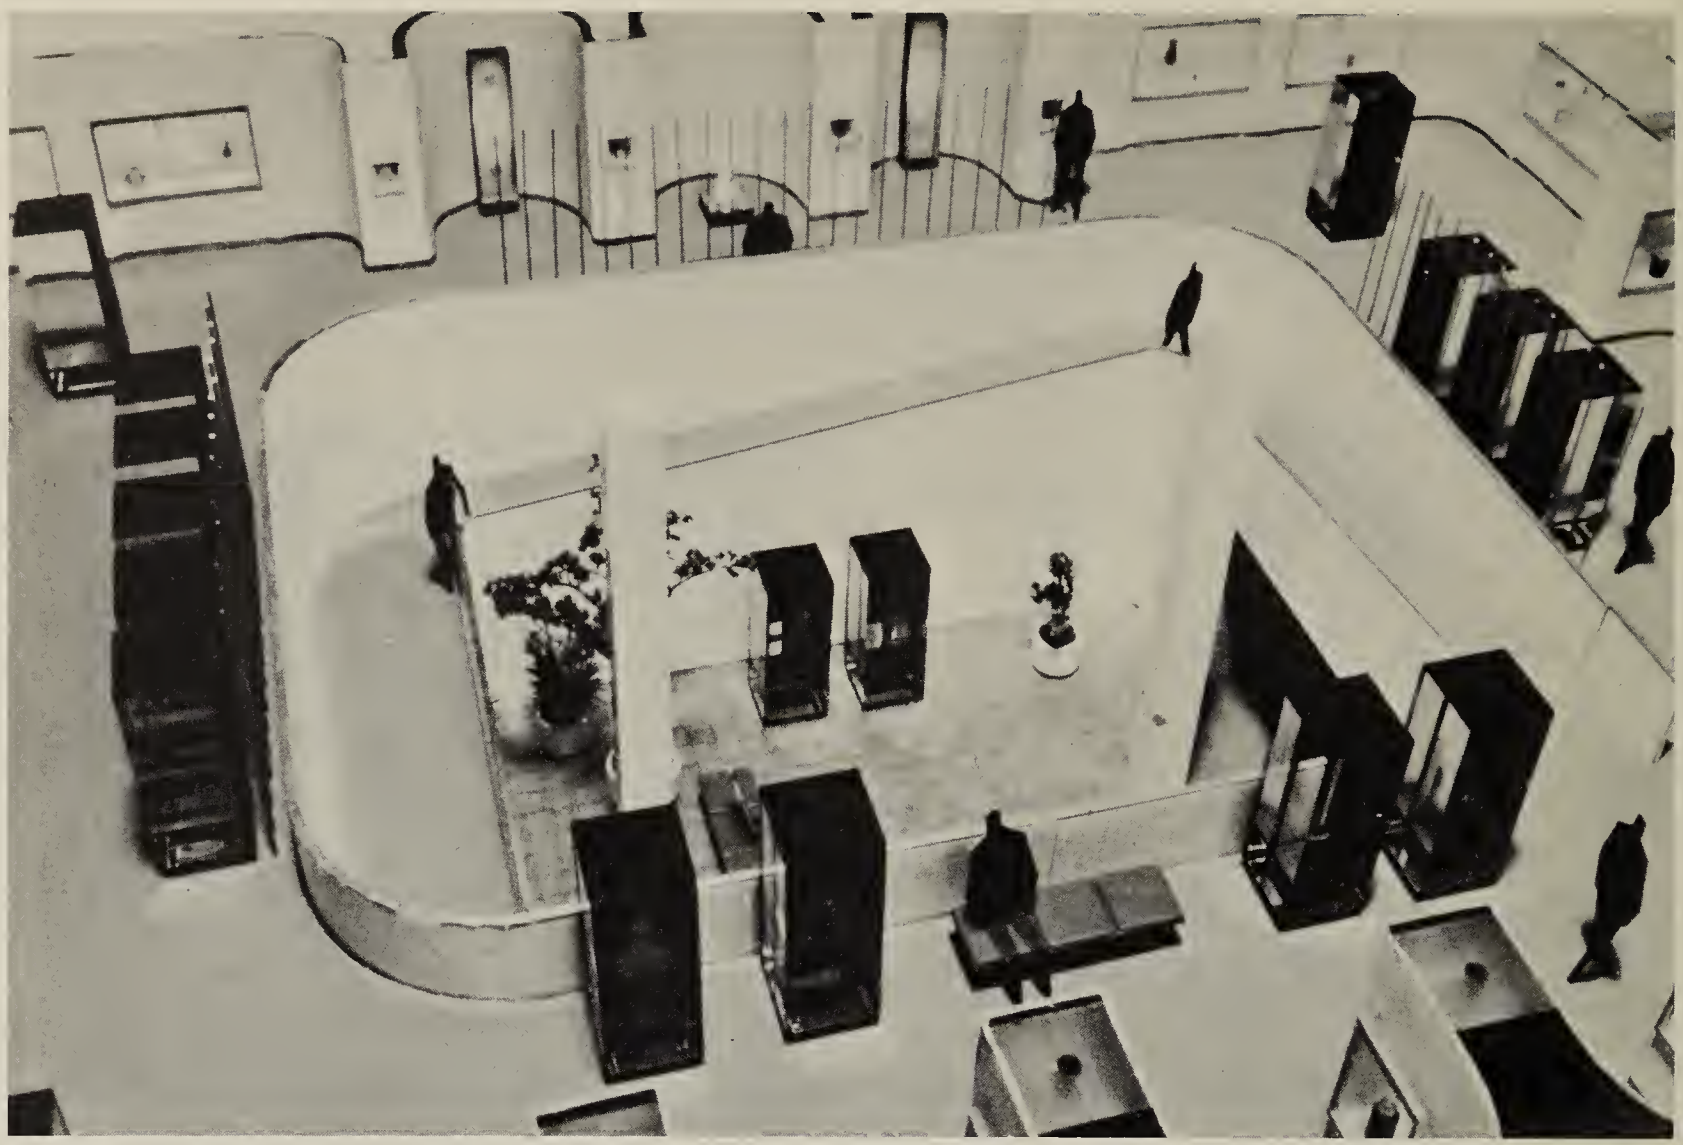
TOLEDO TAKES A NEW LOOK AT GLASS

Glass, which is one of the earliest materials of the arts, has suffered some neglect by artists unfamiliar with methods of handling the medium. However, through a pioneering program first begun by this Museum only six years ago, glass has become a material which can now be used by any skilled craftsman.

The Museum continued to offer limited instruction in this new field of glass craftsmanship while planning for the future. Plans for a new Crafts Studio Building became a reality with groundbreaking for the building on December 16, 1968. The new Crafts Studio Building, given by Owens-Illinois, Inc., Libbey-Owens-Ford Company, and Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corporation, will allow expansion of our teaching in this field of glass craftsmanship. It is the first building to be built specifically for this purpose and will also have facilities for teaching sculpture and metalworking.

In 1966 the Toledo Museum held the first competitive exhibition of glass for American craftsmen. The response was encouraging. The Museum's second biennial exhibition of glass craftsmanship, Toledo Glass National II, was so successful that the Smithsonian Institution has arranged to circulate it nationally for a two-year tour to about 20 museums, including the Smithsonian itself. This competitive glass exhibition, open to all craftsmen working with molten glass, was juried by Mr. Paul Perrot, Director of the Corning Museum of Glass; Mr. Edgar Kaufmann, Jr., Designer and Architectural Historian from Columbia University; and Mr. Tracy Atkinson, Director of the Milwaukee Art Center.



Architects model for Museum's new Glass Gallery

Another re-affirmation of the traditional alliance in the Toledo community between glass technology and art is the re-installation of the Museum's world-famous glass collection in a new two-story facility designed to display, "Glass Through the Ages."

These new galleries will be located in unfinished space adjacent to the Museum's Classic Court in the East Wing. Two floors, connected by a ramp, will surround an open court in the center of the gallery. The 5,000-piece collection of glass will be chronologically arranged in wall cases of varying sizes, carefully illuminated in the most modern manner to present the translucent quality of the glass.

The new galleries will be a veritable museum within a museum and will put the Museum's glass collection in one central location, allowing this portion of the collection to take its rightfully significant position in the Museum's over-all educational program. This will be the first step in the eventual modernization of the entire East half of the Museum.

In addition to this re-orientation of interest in glass, a new interest in modern art is evidenced by the dedication of a new Gallery of Modern Art within the Museum and the establishment of a series of special temporary exhibitions of contemporary art in the new gallery. Subsequent formation of a new Museum-affiliated organization, The Toledo Modern Art Group, has given focus and support to the Museum's modern art program.

Recent exhibitions of modern art have included the popular "Magic Theater," the work of Robert Indiana and the survey of Toledo Collectors of Modern Art. Plans for the future will provide continued explorations of the world of modern art.

". . . (The Toledo Museum of Art is) one of the most beautiful and lively art museums in the country. Beautiful in its classical appearance, exquisite in its contents . . . With its art classes and visits of school children from a vast area around, it is about as vital a museum as you will find . . ."

"I continue to marvel at the Museum's enlightened taste. I am sorry that you were not able to come to London for last winter's 18th century French exhibition and bask in the glory of the Toledo loans. They far outshine any other single museum loan. It gave me a great feeling of national pride."
